Zertificon's Z1 SecureMail Gateway for the first time showcased in the UK

London, 13 April 2012 – Zertificon has released version 4.4.1 of its market proven Z1 SecureMail Gateway. The German email encryption specialist is showcasing Z1 SecureMail Gateway for the first time in the UK, through its newly established UK subsidiary at the Infosecurity London in Earls Court, April, 24-26 (Booth K86).

Z1 SecureMail Gateway is a highly efficient email encryption and signature solution with various extensions to suit all requirements for secure B-to-B and B-to-C email communication. It is available as hardware and virtual appliance, and easily integrates with all standard email and PKI environments. Internal email encryption, including the protection of email communication via mobile devices, is also provided.

A password based approach delivers encrypted PDFs (Z1 KickMail PDF) or sets up secure webmailer accounts (Z1 WebSafe) on-the-fly, both of which are especially suited for B-to-C communication and SMEs.

Z1 CertServer, a certificate management solution that serves as central information source for certificate related queries from users and arbitrary applications is showcased alongside the prestigious gateway solution. And so is Z1 SecureHub that is designed to eliminate the trouble in large file transfer and can be perfectly and seamlessly integrated with Z1 SecureMail, enabling large file transfer policies that provide a most comfortable and flawless user experience.

Z1 SecureMail products are running in more than 400 installations and have achieved an enviable reputation for quality, flexibility, efficiency and ease of use. Infosecurity visitors can register with Zertificon for free admission. Further information can be found at www.zertificon.co.uk.
