

On the safe side with exceet

- Security for distributed devices in an IoT landscape
- Secure communication through hardware-based encryption

Dusseldorf, Jan. 15, 2018 – Security gaps like Meltdown and Spectre show once again that relying on the standard security mechanisms of hardware and operating system is not enough. For distributed IoT devices in particular, installing patches is a hardly solvable task; the risk of data loss is tremendously high. exceet Secure Solutions GmbH, an exceet Group company offers the solution with exceet connect.

With the highly secure solutions from the exceet connect architecture you are optimally prepared for such scenarios. exceet connect TRUST in conjunction with the exceet Gateway creates manageable trust spaces that enable secure communication. With the hardware-based encryption via Secure Element on the gateway, a second line of defense is realized, which works independently of other hardware mechanisms such as CPU and thus also prevents attacks like Meltdown and Spectre. In addition, exceet connect offers the complete system maintenance: secure update mechanisms, encrypted file system on the gateway, remotely manageable Secure Element - Trusted Ecosystems from exceet.
