

Joellenbeck now selling INFINIT Solar Charging Backpacks

The backpack that's bursting with energy – with an integrated solar panel for charging mobile devices

Weertzen, 11 November 2009 – Joellenbeck, with its SPEEDLINK® brand which is one of Europe's leaders in computer and video accessories, has entered into an agreement with the British company Infit and will now be selling the Solar Charging Backpack across Europe.

The Infit Solar Charging Backpack features a high-performance solar panel which converts natural light into energy – and stores this in its integrated, environmentally friendly battery. The power stored in the battery can be used at any time, regardless of where you are in the world. Whether you're hiking, shopping or travelling – the Solar Charging Backpack charges continually during the day allowing you to charge the following devices simply and conveniently in the backpack either using the mini or micro USB connector.

This handy companion has been designed specifically for mobile phones, multimedia players, GPS systems and lots more besides. The internal battery's huge capacity supplies enough power on a full charge to charge two Apple iPhones, three BlackBerry Bolds or four Apple iPod nanos.

The Infit Solar Charging Backpack is available now across Europe for a RRP of €99.99. The following devices can be charged using the Infit Solar Charging Backpack:

- All Apple iPhones and iPod devices
- All BlackBerry devices
- All new Nokia mobile phones – N95 and later
- All new Sony Ericsson mobile phones
- All new LG mobile telephones
- All new Samsung mobile telephones
- All new Motorola mobile telephones
- TomTom GPS devices
- Navman GPS devices
- Mio GPS devices
- All other devices that can be charged via a mini or micro USB connector
